

SYNOPSIS

Attend this leadership forum to find out the answer that is hidden in the title of this programme, "How can we 10X our business?" Or, "What would our business look like if we were 10X our current size?" Or, "What would be different if we were 10X our size?"

These types of 10X questions means that if you're currently if you're running a $30M business, you should be thinking about running a $300M business, which is a completely different animal.

You see, the beauty of asking the 10X question is that it completely changes the conversation. If you're simply thinking about growing your business by 10% or 20% (or even 50%), you're still thinking about what you're currently doing and how you can do that "a little bit better." However, the moment you ask the 10X question, you immediately have to engage a different part of your brain.

You can't 10X your business by doing what you're currently doing - because once you start asking the 10X question and you start getting an idea of what your company might look like at a 10X size, you'll want to start asking some better follow up strategic questions and uncover the DNA from those companies that succeeded in achieving them.
